the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 15.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000). The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to be due to a combination of factors, including a decline in the birth rate, a decline in the death rate, and a decline in the rate of emigration.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to have a significant impact on the UK's economy and society. The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to lead to a decline in the number of people in the workforce, which will lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to pay taxes. This will lead to a decline in the amount of money that is available to fund public services, including the National Health Service (NHS). The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is also expected to lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to support themselves, which will lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to pay for their own care.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is also expected to lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to work, which will lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to pay for their own care. the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1996). The number of people who are malnourished has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.5 billion (FAO 1996).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a goal of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2015 (WHO 1996).

One of the main causes of malnutrition is the lack of access to adequate food. This is often due to poverty, which prevents people from being able to afford to buy enough food. Another cause is the lack of access to land, which prevents people from being able to grow their own food.

There are many ways in which the nutritional status of the world's population can be improved. One way is to increase the production of food. This can be done by increasing the area of land that is used for agriculture, by increasing the productivity of the land, and by increasing the number of people who are involved in agriculture.

Another way to improve the nutritional status of the world's population is to increase the distribution of food. This can be done by increasing the number of people who are involved in the distribution of food, and by increasing the efficiency of the distribution system.

There are many other ways in which the nutritional status of the world's population can be improved. These include increasing the quality of the food that is consumed, and increasing the access to health care. It is important to take action now to improve the nutritional status of the world's population, so that we can ensure that everyone has access to adequate food.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995 (Department of Health 1996).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures. The aim of these initiatives is to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, in a cost-effective and efficient manner.

One of the key initiatives in the public sector is the introduction of competition. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being privatised, and to a number of public sector organisations being required to compete for contracts. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being required to improve their efficiency, and to reduce their costs.

Another key initiative is the restructuring of public sector organisations. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being merged, and to a number of public sector organisations being required to reorganise their structure. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being required to improve their efficiency, and to reduce their costs.

A third key initiative is the introduction of performance measures. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being required to measure their performance, and to report on their performance. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being required to improve their efficiency, and to reduce their costs.

These initiatives have led to a number of public sector organisations being required to improve their efficiency, and to reduce their costs. This has led to a number of public sector organisations being required to improve their efficiency, and to reduce their costs.

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care in the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner (Department of Health 2000).

The aim of this paper is to review the literature on the impact of the public sector on the quality of care, and to discuss the implications for the future of the public sector.
