the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own aims and objectives. The public sector is also funded by the government, and this has implications for the way in which it is managed and the way in which it is funded.

the 'information' and 'communication' fields. The 'information' field is defined as:

...the study of the nature, uses and functions of information, and the ways in which it is created, communicated, evaluated and used as a resource for individual and social development. (p. 1)

The 'communication' field is defined as:

...the study of the nature, uses and functions of communication, and the ways in which it is created, communicated, evaluated and used as a resource for individual and social development. (p. 1)

These definitions are very broad and cover a wide range of topics. They are also very similar to each other, which is not surprising given that they are both part of the same journal.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own aims and objectives. The public sector is also funded by the government, and this has implications for the way in which it is managed and the way in which it is funded.

There is a growing emphasis on the need for the public sector to be more cost-effective and to provide services that are more responsive to the needs of the community. This has led to a number of initiatives aimed at improving the efficiency of the public sector.

One of the main initiatives is the introduction of competition. This has been done in a number of ways, including the privatization of public services, the introduction of competitive tendering, and the creation of public-private partnerships.

Another initiative is the introduction of performance targets. These targets are used to measure the efficiency of public services and to ensure that they are providing the best possible value for money.

Finally, there is a growing emphasis on the need for the public sector to be more transparent. This has led to the introduction of a number of measures aimed at improving the transparency of public services, including the publication of performance data and the establishment of independent bodies to monitor the performance of public services.

These initiatives are all aimed at improving the efficiency of the public sector and ensuring that it is providing the best possible value for money. They are all part of a broader effort to reform the public sector and to ensure that it is able to meet the needs of the community in the 21st century.

The public sector is a vital part of the economy and it is essential that it is able to provide the best possible value for money. The initiatives described above are all aimed at improving the efficiency of the public sector and ensuring that it is providing the best possible value for money.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (2) to ensure that older people are treated as individuals; (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect; (4) to ensure that older people are treated as equal; (5) to ensure that older people are treated as active citizens.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to older people and the actions that will be taken to improve their lives. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently and actively in the community.
- Older people should be able to access the services and facilities they need to live well.
- Older people should be able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives, including:

- To improve the health and well-being of older people.
- To improve the social and economic conditions of older people.
- To improve the quality of life of older people.

The strategy is a key document in the development of policy for older people in the UK. It provides a framework for the development of services and facilities for older people and for the participation of older people in the decisions that affect their lives.
