the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.1 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 4.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a vision for the future of health and social care for older people, and the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) (2000) has published guidelines for the management of older people. The Health of the Nation Review (1999) has also highlighted the need to address the health and social care needs of older people.

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of research on the health and social care needs of older people, and to identify areas for further research. The paper is organized as follows. First, we review the current state of research on the health and social care needs of older people. Second, we identify areas for further research. Third, we discuss the implications of our findings for policy and practice.

2. Current state of research

The current state of research on the health and social care needs of older people is characterized by a number of key findings. First, there is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. Second, there is a growing body of research on the health and social care needs of older people. Third, there is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people.
