the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and the number of people in the private sector has increased by 1.7 million (1990–1999).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care and services provided by the public sector. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the Health Care Act 1999, the introduction of the NHS Constitution, and the introduction of the NHS Performance Framework.

The Health Care Act 1999 introduced a number of changes to the way in which the NHS is run. These changes included the introduction of the NHS Constitution, the introduction of the NHS Performance Framework, and the introduction of the NHS Complaints Procedure.

The NHS Constitution is a document that sets out the values and principles that guide the NHS. It also sets out the rights and responsibilities of NHS staff and patients.

The NHS Performance Framework is a system of measures that are used to monitor and improve the performance of the NHS. It includes measures of patient safety, patient experience, and the quality of care.

The NHS Complaints Procedure is a system that allows patients to make complaints about the NHS. It is designed to be fair and transparent, and to ensure that complaints are handled in a timely and effective manner.

These initiatives are all part of a broader effort to improve the quality of care and services provided by the NHS. They are designed to ensure that the NHS is able to meet the needs of its patients and to provide the highest quality of care.

The NHS is a unique and valuable institution. It is the largest employer in the world, and it provides a wide range of services to the public. It is a source of pride and a source of strength for the UK.

We are committed to ensuring that the NHS continues to provide the highest quality of care and services to its patients. We will continue to work with our staff and our partners to improve the NHS and to ensure that it is able to meet the needs of the public.

We are proud to be part of the NHS and we are committed to ensuring that it continues to be a source of pride and a source of strength for the UK.

We will continue to work with our staff and our partners to improve the NHS and to ensure that it is able to meet the needs of the public.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 4.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a vision for the future of health and social care for older people, and the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has published guidelines on the management of older people with chronic conditions (NICE 2001).
