the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995 (Department of Health 1996).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care in the public sector. The Department of Health (1996) has set out a number of key objectives for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the financial performance of the system. The Department of Health (1996) has also set out a number of key principles for the public sector, including the need to be patient-centred, to be transparent, to be accountable, and to be efficient.

The Department of Health (1996) has also set out a number of key strategies for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the financial performance of the system. the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1996). The number of people who are malnourished has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.6 billion (FAO 1996).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a goal of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2010 (WHO 1996).

One of the main causes of malnutrition is the lack of access to food. In many developing countries, the majority of the population lives in rural areas where food is produced. However, the majority of the population in these countries is poor and cannot afford to buy food.

Another cause of malnutrition is the lack of access to health care. In many developing countries, the majority of the population does not have access to health care. This means that they are unable to prevent or treat diseases that can lead to malnutrition.

There are many other causes of malnutrition, including the lack of access to clean water, the lack of access to education, and the lack of access to employment opportunities. These factors all contribute to the problem of malnutrition in the world.

There are many ways to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. One way is to increase the production of food. Another way is to improve the distribution of food. A third way is to improve the health care system.

There are many other ways to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. The most important thing is to have a plan and to implement it. If we can do this, we can reduce the number of people who are malnourished in the world.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a goal of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2010. This is a challenging goal, but it is one that we can achieve if we work together.
