the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million (1990 to 1999) (Office of National Statistics, 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and social care of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- To ensure that older people have access to the services they need to live well in their own homes.
- To ensure that older people are able to participate in decisions about their care and services.
- To ensure that older people are able to live active and fulfilling lives.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives, including:

- To reduce the number of older people who are in long-term care.
- To improve the quality of care for older people in long-term care.
- To ensure that older people have access to the services they need to live well in their own homes.

The strategy is a key document for the development of services for older people in the UK. It provides a framework for the development of services and sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and social care of older people.
