the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has also become an important employer of women, with 50% of the public sector workforce being female in 1995 (Department of Social Security 1996).

There are a number of reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of women. First, the public sector has a high proportion of female employees in a number of key areas, such as health care, education and social services. Second, the public sector has a high proportion of part-time employees, which is attractive to women who are balancing work and family commitments. Third, the public sector has a high proportion of employees who are employed on a permanent basis, which is attractive to women who are seeking long-term employment.

There is a growing emphasis on the importance of the public sector in the provision of health care, and the need to ensure that the public sector is able to meet the needs of the population. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the establishment of the National Health Service (NHS) in 1948, and the creation of the Department of Health in 1991. The NHS is a public sector organization that provides health care to all people in the UK. The Department of Health is responsible for the overall management of the NHS, and for ensuring that it is able to meet the needs of the population.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of social care services, which are designed to help people with disabilities or other needs to live independently. Social care services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of education services, which are designed to help people to learn and develop their skills. Education services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of housing services, which are designed to help people to find a place to live. Housing services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of transport services, which are designed to help people to get from one place to another. Transport services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of cultural services, which are designed to help people to enjoy the arts and other cultural activities. Cultural services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of leisure services, which are designed to help people to relax and enjoy their free time. Leisure services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of environmental services, which are designed to help people to live in a clean and healthy environment. Environmental services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of fire and rescue services, which are designed to help people to stay safe from fire and other hazards. Fire and rescue services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of police services, which are designed to help people to stay safe from crime and other threats. Police services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of prison services, which are designed to help people who have been convicted of a crime to serve their sentence. Prison services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of probation services, which are designed to help people who have been convicted of a crime to reintegrate into society. Probation services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

The public sector is also responsible for the provision of mental health services, which are designed to help people with mental health problems to live independently. Mental health services are provided by local authorities, and are funded by the government.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994). These reports have highlighted the need for a new approach to children's rights, one that is based on the principle of the best interests of the child.

The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) is a landmark document in this regard. It was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1989, and is the first international treaty to be ratified by more than 100 countries. The UNCRC sets out a comprehensive set of rights for children, and is a key reference point for child protection work.

The UNCRC is based on the principle of the best interests of the child. This principle is central to child protection work, and is reflected in the UNCRC's provisions on the right to life, the right to health, the right to education, and the right to a family. The UNCRC also sets out a range of other rights, including the right to be heard, the right to privacy, and the right to a fair trial.

The UNCRC is a key reference point for child protection work, and is a key source of guidance for child protection workers. The UNCRC provides a framework for child protection work, and sets out a range of principles and standards that child protection workers should follow.
