the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.2 billion (United Nations 1999). The number of children in the world who are under 5 years of age has increased by 0.6 billion in the same period. The number of children in the world who are under 15 years of age is projected to increase by 1.2 billion by the year 2020 (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing concern that the rapid increase in the number of children in the world is leading to a decline in the quality of life for children. This is because the rapid increase in the number of children is leading to a decline in the resources available to each child. This is particularly true in developing countries, where the resources available to each child are already limited. This is a major concern for the world's leaders, who are trying to find ways to improve the quality of life for children in the world.

One of the ways to improve the quality of life for children is to improve the quality of the environment. This is because the quality of the environment has a direct impact on the quality of life for children. For example, if the environment is polluted, children are more likely to get sick. If the environment is clean, children are more likely to be healthy. Therefore, it is important to improve the quality of the environment for the benefit of children.

Another way to improve the quality of life for children is to improve the quality of the education system. This is because the quality of the education system has a direct impact on the quality of life for children. For example, if the education system is of high quality, children are more likely to be educated. If the education system is of low quality, children are more likely to be illiterate. Therefore, it is important to improve the quality of the education system for the benefit of children.

There are many other ways to improve the quality of life for children, but these are the two most important. By improving the quality of the environment and the quality of the education system, we can improve the quality of life for children in the world. This is a goal that we should all strive to achieve.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.2 billion, from 1.1 billion in 1980 to 2.3 billion in 1999 (United Nations 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 21st century. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) is the only international treaty that has been ratified by all 191 member states of the United Nations.

The Convention sets out the rights of children and young people, and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights. The Convention is a landmark document in the history of children's rights, and it has inspired many national laws and policies.

The Convention is a comprehensive document that covers a wide range of issues, including the right to life, the right to education, the right to health, and the right to participate in decisions that affect their lives.

The Convention is a living document that is constantly being updated and revised. The United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child is responsible for monitoring the implementation of the Convention, and it has issued many recommendations to governments.

The Convention is a powerful tool for promoting the rights of children and young people. It is a document that has inspired many people around the world, and it is a document that is constantly being used to challenge governments and to demand better for children.
