There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care in the public sector. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) in 2001, the introduction of the National Clinical Audit Programme in 2002, and the introduction of the National Framework for the Quality Improvement of Health Services in 2003.

The NPSA is a non-departmental public body, established by the Department of Health in 2001. Its main purpose is to improve patient safety and the quality of care in the public sector.

The NPSA has a number of key functions, including:

- To monitor and report on patient safety incidents.
- To conduct investigations into serious patient safety incidents.
- To develop and promote best practice in patient safety.
- To provide advice and support to health service providers.

The NPSA has a number of key initiatives, including:

- The National Patient Safety Programme (NPSP), which is a national programme of research and development aimed at improving patient safety.
- The National Patient Safety Forum (NPSF), which is a forum for the discussion and coordination of patient safety issues.
- The National Patient Safety Alert (NPSA), which is a national alert system for the dissemination of information on patient safety incidents.

The NPSA has a number of key publications, including:

- The National Patient Safety Incident Reporting and Learning System (NPSIRLS), which is a national system for the reporting and learning from patient safety incidents.
- The National Patient Safety Alert (NPSA), which is a national alert system for the dissemination of information on patient safety incidents.
- The National Patient Safety Forum (NPSF), which is a forum for the discussion and coordination of patient safety issues.
