There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures. The aim of these initiatives is to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, in a cost-effective and efficient manner.

The aim of this paper is to review the literature on the impact of the public sector on the health of the population. The paper will focus on the impact of the public sector on the health of the population in the UK, and will consider the impact of the public sector on the health of the population in the context of the initiatives mentioned above.

The paper will first consider the impact of the public sector on the health of the population in the UK, and will then consider the impact of the public sector on the health of the population in the context of the initiatives mentioned above. The paper will conclude by discussing the implications of the findings for the future of the public sector.

2. Methods

The literature was searched using the following keywords: 'public sector', 'health', 'population', 'UK', 'efficiency', 'competition', 'restructuring', 'performance measures'. The search was conducted using the following databases: Medline, Psycinfo, and Sociofile.

The search was limited to the English language, and to the period 1980-1995. The search was conducted using the following criteria: the title of the article, the abstract, and the keywords.

The search identified a total of 100 articles. The articles were then screened on the basis of the title, the abstract, and the keywords. The articles that were selected for full-text review were those that met the following criteria: the article was relevant to the topic, the article was written by a reputable author, and the article was published in a reputable journal.

The full-text review of the articles identified a total of 20 articles that were relevant to the topic. The articles were then screened on the basis of the title, the abstract, and the keywords. the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own role to play. The public sector is also a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994). These reports have highlighted the need for a new approach to children's rights, and have led to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) in 1989.

The UNCRC is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children, and provides a framework for the development of national legislation and policies. The Convention has been ratified by over 100 countries, and is now the most widely accepted international instrument on children's rights.

The UNCRC has led to a new approach to children's rights, and has provided a framework for the development of national legislation and policies. It has also led to a new awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s.
