The public sector has also become an important employer of people who are in a country, with 1.5 million people in a country employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 1 million in 1980. The public sector has also become an important employer of people who are in a region, with 1.5 million people in a region employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 1 million in 1980.

The public sector has also become an important employer of people who are in a local authority, with 1.5 million people in a local authority employed in the public sector in 1995, compared with 1 million in 1980. the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 2001). The number of people who are malnourished has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion (FAO 2001).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a target of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2015 (WHO 2001).

One of the main causes of malnutrition is the lack of access to food. In many developing countries, the majority of the population lives in rural areas where food is produced. However, the majority of the population in these countries is poor and cannot afford to buy food.

Another cause of malnutrition is the lack of access to health care. In many developing countries, the majority of the population does not have access to health care. This means that they are unable to treat any illnesses that they may have, which can lead to malnutrition.

There are a number of ways in which the nutritional status of the world's population can be improved. One way is to increase the production of food. This can be done by increasing the area of land used for agriculture and by using more efficient farming methods.

Another way to improve the nutritional status of the world's population is to increase the access to health care. This can be done by building more health centres and by training more health workers.

There are a number of other ways in which the nutritional status of the world's population can be improved. These include increasing the access to food, increasing the access to health care, and increasing the access to education.

It is important to note that the nutritional status of the world's population is a complex issue. It is not simply a matter of increasing the production of food or increasing the access to health care. It is a complex issue that requires a multi-faceted approach.

One of the main challenges in improving the nutritional status of the world's population is the lack of resources. In many developing countries, there is a lack of money, land, and labour. This makes it difficult to increase the production of food or to increase the access to health care.

Another challenge is the lack of knowledge. In many developing countries, the majority of the population does not know how to grow food or how to take care of their health. This means that they are unable to improve their nutritional status.

There are a number of ways in which these challenges can be overcome. One way is to provide the population with the resources that they need. This can be done by providing them with money, land, and labour.

Another way to overcome these challenges is to provide the population with the knowledge that they need. This can be done by providing them with training and education.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–2000) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2020 (Office for National Statistics 2001). The number of people aged 65 and over in the UK is projected to increase from 10.5 million in 1990 to 12.5 million in 2020, with the number of people aged 75 and over increasing from 4.5 million to 6.5 million in the same period (Office for National Statistics 2001).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has identified the need to develop a 'new paradigm' for health care, which is based on the principles of prevention, promotion, and primary care. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified the need to develop a 'new paradigm' for health care, which is based on the principles of prevention, promotion, and primary care.
