the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995 (Department of Health 1996).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures.

One of the main reasons for the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector is the increasing pressure on public sector budgets. This is due to a number of factors, including the increasing cost of health care, the increasing cost of education, and the increasing cost of social services.

Another reason for the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector is the increasing demand for public services. This is due to a number of factors, including the increasing population, the increasing demand for health care, and the increasing demand for education.

There are a number of ways in which the efficiency of the public sector can be improved. These include the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures.

One of the main ways in which the efficiency of the public sector can be improved is by the introduction of competition. This can be done by allowing private companies to compete for public sector contracts.

Another way in which the efficiency of the public sector can be improved is by the restructuring of public sector organisations. This can be done by merging public sector organisations, or by transferring public sector functions to private companies.

A third way in which the efficiency of the public sector can be improved is by the introduction of performance measures. These measures can be used to monitor the performance of public sector organisations, and to ensure that they are delivering the services that are required by the public.

There are a number of challenges associated with improving the efficiency of the public sector. These include the need to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, and the need to ensure that the public sector is able to operate within its budget.

Despite these challenges, there is a growing consensus that the efficiency of the public sector must be improved. This is because the public sector is a major part of the economy, and it is essential that it is able to deliver the services that are required by the public.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector has also become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded. the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1998) and the number of people in the public sector who are employed in the health sector has increased by 1.2 million (from 1.3 million in 1980 to 2.5 million in 1998) (Department of Health 1999).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care provided by the public sector. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the Health Care Act 1999, which sets out the framework for the regulation of health care providers. The Act requires health care providers to register with the Health Care Commission, which is responsible for monitoring and improving the quality of care provided by health care providers.

The Health Care Commission has a number of functions, including the following:

- To monitor and improve the quality of care provided by health care providers.
- To investigate complaints about health care providers.
- To provide information and advice to health care providers.
- To promote the interests of patients and the public.

The Health Care Commission has a number of powers, including the following:

- To require health care providers to provide information to the Commission.
- To require health care providers to undergo inspections by the Commission.
- To require health care providers to take action to improve the quality of care provided.
- To require health care providers to pay fines if they fail to comply with the Commission's requirements.

The Health Care Commission has a number of objectives, including the following:

- To ensure that health care providers provide high quality care to patients.
- To ensure that health care providers are accountable to the public.
- To ensure that health care providers are transparent in their dealings with the public.
- To ensure that health care providers are efficient and effective in their operations.

The Health Care Commission has a number of challenges, including the following:

- To ensure that it has sufficient resources to carry out its functions.
- To ensure that it has the necessary expertise to carry out its functions.
- To ensure that it has the necessary independence to carry out its functions.
- To ensure that it has the necessary transparency in its operations.

The Health Care Commission has a number of achievements, including the following:

- It has successfully monitored and improved the quality of care provided by health care providers.
- It has successfully investigated complaints about health care providers.
- It has successfully provided information and advice to health care providers.
- It has successfully promoted the interests of patients and the public.

The Health Care Commission has a number of future plans, including the following:

- To continue to monitor and improve the quality of care provided by health care providers.
- To continue to investigate complaints about health care providers.
- To continue to provide information and advice to health care providers.
- To continue to promote the interests of patients and the public.
