the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a vision for the future of mental health care, which includes a commitment to 'improving the lives of people with mental health problems'.

One of the key challenges facing mental health services is how to ensure that people with mental health problems are able to live their lives to the full, and that they are able to participate in the community. This is a challenge that requires a multi-disciplinary approach, involving mental health professionals, social workers, and the community.

One of the key areas of research in this field is the role of the family in mental health care. The family is often the first point of contact for people with mental health problems, and it is important to understand how the family can best support the individual.

One of the key issues in this area is the role of the family in the diagnosis and treatment of mental health problems. The family can play a crucial role in the diagnosis of mental health problems, and it is important to understand how the family can best support the individual.
