the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The number of people in the public sector who are employed in the health sector has increased by 1.2 million (from 1.2 million in 1980 to 2.4 million in 1995).

There are a number of reasons why the public sector has grown so rapidly. One reason is that the public sector has become the main provider of health care in the UK. Another reason is that the public sector has become the main provider of social care in the UK. A third reason is that the public sector has become the main provider of education in the UK.

The public sector has also become the main provider of housing in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of public housing estates. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of social services, such as day care for children and care for the elderly.

The public sector has also become the main provider of transport in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of public transport systems, such as the London Underground and the National Rail network. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of transport services, such as bus and train services.

The public sector has also become the main provider of culture in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of cultural institutions, such as museums, galleries and libraries. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of cultural services, such as theatre and music performances.

The public sector has also become the main provider of leisure in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of leisure facilities, such as parks, sports grounds and swimming pools. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of leisure services, such as sports and recreation activities.

The public sector has also become the main provider of justice in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of justice facilities, such as courts and prisons. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of justice services, such as legal aid and probation services.

The public sector has also become the main provider of defence in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of defence facilities, such as barracks and ships. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of defence services, such as military training and operations.

The public sector has also become the main provider of foreign aid in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of foreign aid facilities, such as embassies and consulates. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of foreign aid services, such as development aid and humanitarian aid.

The public sector has also become the main provider of international relations in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of international relations facilities, such as embassies and consulates. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of international relations services, such as diplomatic and consular services.

The public sector has also become the main provider of science and technology in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of science and technology facilities, such as research centres and laboratories. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of science and technology services, such as research and development activities.

The public sector has also become the main provider of space exploration in the UK. This is because the public sector has been responsible for building and maintaining a large number of space exploration facilities, such as space stations and rockets. The public sector has also been responsible for providing a range of space exploration services, such as space research and exploration activities.
