The first of these is the fact that the system is not a simple one. It is a complex system, and as such, it is not possible to understand it by looking at its parts in isolation. The system is a whole, and its behavior is determined by the interactions between its parts. This is a fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional engineering and science.

The second of these is the fact that the system is not a static one. It is a dynamic system, and its behavior changes over time. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional engineering and science.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.2 billion (United Nations 1999). The number of people in the world who are aged 65 years and over has increased by 100 million in the same period. The number of people in the world who are aged 65 years and over is projected to increase to 1.2 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of the ageing population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has identified the need to develop a 'new paradigm' for health and social care that is based on the principles of 'active ageing' (WHO 1999). The WHO defines 'active ageing' as the process of developing and maintaining the functional abilities that enable people to participate in society. The WHO identifies three key components of active ageing: health, participation, and security.

The WHO identifies three key components of active ageing: health, participation, and security. Health is defined as the state of well-being, not just the absence of disease. Participation is defined as the ability to take part in the life of the community. Security is defined as the ability to meet the basic needs of life. The WHO identifies three key components of active ageing: health, participation, and security.

The CRC is a legally binding treaty that sets out the rights of children and the responsibilities of governments to protect and promote these rights.

The CRC is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It is the first time that the rights of children have been set out in a single, comprehensive document. There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994). These reports have highlighted the need for a new approach to children's rights, and have led to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) in 1989.

The UNCRC is a landmark document in the history of children's rights. It sets out the rights of children, and provides a framework for the development of national legislation and policies. The Convention has been ratified by over 100 countries, and is now the most widely ratified human rights treaty in the world.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994). These reports have highlighted the need for a new approach to children's rights, one that is based on the principle of the best interests of the child.

The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) is a landmark document in this regard. It was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1989, and is the first time in history that a treaty has been signed by more than 100 countries. The UNCRC sets out the rights of children, and provides a framework for the development of national laws and policies to protect and promote these rights.

The UNCRC is a comprehensive document, covering a wide range of issues. It includes provisions on the right to life, the right to a name and nationality, the right to a family, the right to education, the right to health, and the right to protection from abuse and exploitation. It also includes provisions on the right to participate in decisions that affect their lives, and the right to be heard in legal proceedings.

The UNCRC is a landmark document, and its adoption is a significant step towards the realization of children's rights. It provides a framework for the development of national laws and policies to protect and promote these rights, and it sets out the obligations of governments to ensure that these rights are realized for all children.

The first of these is the fact that the system is not a simple one. It is a complex system, and as such, it is not possible to understand it by looking at its parts in isolation. The system is a whole, and its behavior is determined by the interactions between its parts. This is a fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The second of these is the fact that the system is dynamic. It is not a static system, and its behavior changes over time. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The third of these is the fact that the system is open. It is not a closed system, and it interacts with its environment. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The fourth of these is the fact that the system is self-organizing. It is not a system that is controlled from the outside, and it is not a system that is designed from the top down. It is a system that organizes itself, and its behavior emerges from the interactions between its parts. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The fifth of these is the fact that the system is resilient. It is not a system that is fragile, and it is not a system that is easily disrupted. It is a system that is able to withstand change, and it is able to adapt to new circumstances. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The sixth of these is the fact that the system is sustainable. It is not a system that is unsustainable, and it is not a system that is doomed to fail. It is a system that is able to continue to exist, and it is able to thrive. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The seventh of these is the fact that the system is equitable. It is not a system that is unfair, and it is not a system that is biased. It is a system that is fair, and it is one that is able to provide for the needs of all its members. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The eighth of these is the fact that the system is just. It is not a system that is unjust, and it is not a system that is oppressive. It is a system that is just, and it is one that is able to provide for the needs of all its members. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The ninth of these is the fact that the system is peaceful. It is not a system that is violent, and it is not a system that is warlike. It is a system that is peaceful, and it is one that is able to provide for the needs of all its members. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.

The tenth of these is the fact that the system is harmonious. It is not a system that is disharmonious, and it is not a system that is in conflict. It is a system that is harmonious, and it is one that is able to provide for the needs of all its members. This is another fundamental principle of systems thinking, and it is one that is often overlooked in traditional approaches to problem-solving.
