the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion, and the number of people aged 65 and over has increased from 0.5 billion to 0.7 billion (United Nations 1999). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 1.2 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a 'Global Strategy on Ageing and Health' (WHO 1999) which aims to 'enable older people to live longer, healthier, and more active lives'. The WHO strategy is based on three pillars: (1) 'Promoting healthy ageing', (2) 'Protecting older people from abuse and neglect', and (3) 'Supporting older people to live in their communities'.

The WHO strategy is based on the principle that 'older people should be able to live in their own homes and communities, and to participate in the life of their communities'. The WHO strategy is based on the principle that 'older people should be able to live in their own homes and communities, and to participate in the life of their communities'. The WHO strategy is based on the principle that 'older people should be able to live in their own homes and communities, and to participate in the life of their communities'.

The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 1.2 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a 'Global Strategy on Ageing and Health' (WHO 1999) which aims to 'enable older people to live longer, healthier, and more active lives'. The WHO strategy is based on three pillars: (1) 'Promoting healthy ageing', (2) 'Protecting older people from abuse and neglect', and (3) 'Supporting older people to live in their communities'.

The WHO strategy is based on the principle that 'older people should be able to live in their own homes and communities, and to participate in the life of their communities'. the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has also become an important employer of women, with 50% of public sector employees being women in 1995 (Department of Social Security 1996).

There are a number of reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of women. First, the public sector has a high proportion of female employees in a number of key areas, such as health care, education and social services. Second, the public sector has a high proportion of part-time employees, which is attractive to women who are balancing work and family responsibilities. Third, the public sector has a high proportion of employees who are employed on permanent contracts, which is attractive to women who are seeking long-term employment.
