the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 4.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to be due to a combination of factors, including a decline in the birth rate, a decline in the death rate, and a decline in the rate of emigration.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to have a significant impact on the UK's economy and society. The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to lead to a decline in the number of people in the workforce, which will lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to pay taxes. This will lead to a decline in the amount of money that is available to the government to spend on public services, including health care and education. The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is also expected to lead to a decline in the number of people who are able to support themselves, which will lead to an increase in the number of people who are dependent on the state for financial support.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is also expected to have a significant impact on the UK's health care system. The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to lead to an increase in the number of people who are able to pay for health care, which will lead to an increase in the amount of money that is available to the government to spend on health care. This will lead to an increase in the number of people who are able to receive health care, which will lead to an increase in the number of people who are able to live longer and healthier lives. The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is also expected to lead to an increase in the number of people who are able to support themselves, which will lead to a decline in the number of people who are dependent on the state for financial support.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is also expected to have a significant impact on the UK's education system. the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 2001). The number of people who are malnourished has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion (FAO 2001).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a target of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2015 (WHO 2001).

One of the main causes of malnutrition is the lack of access to food. In many parts of the world, people do not have enough food to eat. This is often due to poverty, which prevents them from buying food. It is also often due to a lack of access to land, which prevents them from growing their own food.

Another main cause of malnutrition is the lack of access to clean water. In many parts of the world, people do not have access to clean water. This is often due to a lack of infrastructure, which prevents them from getting water. It is also often due to a lack of access to land, which prevents them from growing their own food.

There are many other causes of malnutrition, including a lack of access to health care, a lack of access to education, and a lack of access to information. All of these factors can contribute to malnutrition, and they often interact with each other.

There are many ways to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. One way is to increase the production of food. This can be done by increasing the amount of land that is used for agriculture, by improving the methods of agriculture, and by increasing the number of people who are involved in agriculture.

Another way to improve the nutritional status of the world's population is to increase the access to food. This can be done by improving the infrastructure, by providing subsidies to farmers, and by providing food aid to people who are in need.

There are many other ways to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. All of these ways are important, and they all need to be implemented in order to achieve the target of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2015.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a target of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2015 (WHO 2001). This target is ambitious, but it is achievable if we all work together to improve the nutritional status of the world's population.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own aims and objectives. The public sector is also a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.
