the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995) and the number of people in the private sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995).

There is a growing emphasis on the need for the public sector to be more cost-effective and to provide services that are more responsive to the needs of the community. This has led to a number of initiatives aimed at improving the efficiency of the public sector.

One of the most important initiatives is the introduction of competition. This has been done in a number of ways, including the privatization of public utilities, the introduction of competitive tendering for public services, and the creation of public-private partnerships.

Another important initiative is the introduction of performance targets. These targets are used to measure the efficiency and effectiveness of public services. They are used to identify areas where improvement is needed and to monitor progress towards achieving these targets.

Finally, there is a growing emphasis on the need for the public sector to be more transparent and accountable. This has led to a number of initiatives aimed at improving the transparency and accountability of public services.

One of the most important initiatives is the introduction of Freedom of Information (FOI) legislation. This legislation gives the public the right to access information held by public bodies. It is used to ensure that public bodies are accountable to the public and to prevent corruption.

Another important initiative is the introduction of the Public Access to Information Act (PAIA). This act gives the public the right to access information held by public bodies. It is used to ensure that public bodies are accountable to the public and to prevent corruption.

Finally, there is a growing emphasis on the need for the public sector to be more responsive to the needs of the community. This has led to a number of initiatives aimed at improving the responsiveness of public services.

One of the most important initiatives is the introduction of the Public Service User Groups (PSUGs). These groups are made up of people who use public services. They are used to ensure that public services are responsive to the needs of the community.

Another important initiative is the introduction of the Public Service User Panels (PSUPs). These panels are made up of people who use public services. They are used to ensure that public services are responsive to the needs of the community.

Finally, there is a growing emphasis on the need for the public sector to be more cost-effective. This has led to a number of initiatives aimed at improving the cost-effectiveness of public services.

One of the most important initiatives is the introduction of the Public Service Cost-Effectiveness Review (PS CER). This review is used to identify areas where public services can be made more cost-effective.
