the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999 (Department of Health 2000).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care in the public sector. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a number of key objectives for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the experience of patients. The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key principles for the public sector, including the need to be patient-centred, to be transparent, to be accountable, and to be fair.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key strategies for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the experience of patients.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key measures for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the experience of patients.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key targets for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the experience of patients.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key indicators for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the experience of patients.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key outcomes for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to reduce waiting times, to improve the efficiency of the system, and to improve the experience of patients.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 250 million to 300 million (FAO 1996).

There are a number of reasons why the world's population is becoming more undernourished. First, the world's population is growing rapidly. The world population is projected to increase from 5.5 billion in 1990 to 7.5 billion in 2020 (United Nations 1994). This increase in population will place a greater demand on the world's food resources.

Second, the world's food resources are being depleted. The world's forests are being cleared at a rapid rate, and the world's fisheries are being overfished. This depletion of food resources will reduce the world's food supply.

Third, the world's food resources are being distributed unevenly. The world's food resources are concentrated in a few countries, and the majority of the world's population is living in countries that are food insecure.

Fourth, the world's food resources are being used inefficiently. The world's food resources are being wasted, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable.

Fifth, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable.

Sixth, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable.

Seventh, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable.

Eighth, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable.

Ninth, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable.

Tenth, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable.

Eleventh, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable.

Twelfth, the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable. The world's food resources are being used in a way that is not sustainable, and the world's food resources are being used in a way that is not equitable.
