the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own aims and objectives. The public sector is also a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (HM Treasury 2000).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of public sector organisations. The UK government has set a target of reducing the public sector deficit by 2% of GDP by 2001 and has introduced a number of measures to achieve this, including the introduction of the Public Finance Agreement (PFA) in 1999. The PFA is a framework for the management of public sector organisations, which aims to improve efficiency and reduce costs.

One of the key measures introduced by the PFA is the requirement for public sector organisations to implement a system of internal control. This system is designed to ensure that public sector organisations are able to manage their resources effectively and efficiently, and to ensure that they are able to deliver the services that they are required to provide.

The internal control system is a framework of policies and procedures that are designed to ensure that public sector organisations are able to manage their resources effectively and efficiently. the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own aims and objectives. The public sector is also funded by the government, and this means that it is subject to government control and regulation.
