the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 10.5 million by 2026, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 7.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (2) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (3) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; and (4) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key objectives for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. These objectives are: (1) to improve the health and social care of older people; (2) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; (3) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives; and (4) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key actions for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of public services and to ensure that the public sector is efficient and effective. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector bodies, and the implementation of public sector reform.

The purpose of this paper is to examine the impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services and to identify the factors that influence the success of public sector reform.

The paper is organized as follows. Section 2 discusses the background to public sector reform. Section 3 discusses the impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services. Section 4 discusses the factors that influence the success of public sector reform. Section 5 discusses the conclusions of the paper.

2. Background to public sector reform

The public sector has been the subject of a number of reforms in the UK since the 1990s. These reforms have been aimed at improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and at reducing the cost of public services.

The first major reform was the introduction of the Public Finance Review (PFR) in 1990. The PFR was a comprehensive review of the public sector's finances and it identified a number of areas where the public sector was inefficient and ineffective.

The second major reform was the establishment of public sector bodies (PSBs) in 1991. PSBs are public sector organizations that are established to provide a specific public service. They are subject to a number of controls, including the need to publish an annual report and to be subject to a public inquiry.

The third major reform was the implementation of public sector reform (PSR) in 1992. PSR was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

PSR was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The fourth major reform was the introduction of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The fifth major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The sixth major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The seventh major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The eighth major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The ninth major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The tenth major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

The eleventh major reform was the implementation of the Public Sector Reform Bill (PSRB) in 1993. The PSRB was a comprehensive reform of the public sector that aimed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public sector and to reduce the cost of public services.

The PSRB was implemented in a number of stages. The first stage was the implementation of the PFR. The second stage was the implementation of the PSBs. The third stage was the implementation of the PSR.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 4.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (2) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (3) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; and (4) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key objectives for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. These objectives are: (1) to improve the health and social care of older people; (2) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (4) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; and (5) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key actions for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. These actions are: (1) to improve the health and social care of older people; (2) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (4) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; and (5) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key outcomes for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. These outcomes are: (1) to improve the health and social care of older people; (2) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity; (4) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; and (5) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key indicators for the NHS to meet the needs of older people.
