the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1996).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. First, the world population has increased from 5 billion in 1987 to 6 billion in 1999, and is projected to reach 8 billion by 2025 (UN 1998). Second, the world population is ageing, and the proportion of the population aged 65 and over is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Third, the world population is becoming more urban, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Fourth, the world population is becoming more educated, and the proportion of the population with a primary school education is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Fifth, the world population is becoming more mobile, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Sixth, the world population is becoming more affluent, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Seventh, the world population is becoming more diverse, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Eighth, the world population is becoming more heterogeneous, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Ninth, the world population is becoming more complex, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Tenth, the world population is becoming more dynamic, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Eleventh, the world population is becoming more volatile, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Twelfth, the world population is becoming more unstable, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Thirteenth, the world population is becoming more unpredictable, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Fourteenth, the world population is becoming more uncertain, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Fifteenth, the world population is becoming more risky, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Sixteenth, the world population is becoming more dangerous, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Seventeenth, the world population is becoming more harmful, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Eighteenth, the world population is becoming more destructive, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Nineteenth, the world population is becoming more polluting, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Twentieth, the world population is becoming more degrading, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Twenty-first, the world population is becoming more corrupting, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Twenty-second, the world population is becoming more debasing, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Twenty-third, the world population is becoming more humiliating, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Twenty-fourth, the world population is becoming more mortifying, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Twenty-fifth, the world population is becoming more humiliating, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Twenty-sixth, the world population is becoming more mortifying, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Twenty-seventh, the world population is becoming more humiliating, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Twenty-eighth, the world population is becoming more mortifying, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Twenty-ninth, the world population is becoming more humiliating, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). Thirtieth, the world population is becoming more mortifying, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998).

Thirty-first, the world population is becoming more humiliating, and the proportion of the population living in urban areas is increasing in all countries (UN 1998). the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1996).

There are a number of reasons why the world's population is becoming more undernourished. First, the world's population is growing rapidly. The world population is projected to reach 6 billion by the year 2000, and to reach 8 billion by the year 2025 (UNEP 1992).

Second, the world's population is becoming more urban. In 1990, 54% of the world's population lived in urban areas. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 60% (UNEP 1992).

Third, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food imports. In 1990, the world's population imported 10% of its food. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Fourth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food aid. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from aid. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Fifth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from developed countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from developed countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Sixth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from industrialized countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from industrialized countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Seventh, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from developed countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from developed countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Eighth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from industrialized countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from industrialized countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Ninth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from developed countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from developed countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Tenth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from industrialized countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from industrialized countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Eleventh, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from developed countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from developed countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Twelfth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from industrialized countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from industrialized countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Thirteenth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from developed countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from developed countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Fourteenth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from industrialized countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from industrialized countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Fifteenth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from developed countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from developed countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).

Sixteenth, the world's population is becoming more dependent on food from industrialized countries. In 1990, the world's population received 10% of its food from industrialized countries. By the year 2000, this figure is projected to rise to 20% (UNEP 1992).
