the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and the number of people in the public sector has increased by 2.5 million (1990–1999).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of public services and to ensure that the public sector is efficient and effective. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector bodies, and the implementation of public sector reform.

The purpose of this paper is to examine the impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services. The paper will first review the literature on public sector reform and quality of public services. It will then discuss the impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services in the UK.

The paper is organized as follows. Section 2 reviews the literature on public sector reform and quality of public services. Section 3 discusses the impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services in the UK. Section 4 concludes.

3. Impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services in the UK

The impact of public sector reform on the quality of public services in the UK has been a subject of considerable debate. There is a growing consensus that public sector reform has led to a decline in the quality of public services. This decline has been attributed to a number of factors, including the reduction in public sector funding, the increase in public sector competition, and the increase in public sector privatization.

One of the main factors in the decline in the quality of public services is the reduction in public sector funding. This reduction has led to a number of cuts in public sector services, including cuts in public sector education, public sector health care, and public sector social services.

Another factor in the decline in the quality of public services is the increase in public sector competition. This increase has led to a number of public sector services being privatized, including public sector education, public sector health care, and public sector social services.

A third factor in the decline in the quality of public services is the increase in public sector privatization. This increase has led to a number of public sector services being sold to private companies, including public sector education, public sector health care, and public sector social services.
