the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995 (Department of Health 1996).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of new management practices.

One of the key challenges facing the public sector is the need to improve the quality of services. This is a challenge that is being met by a number of initiatives, including the introduction of new standards, the introduction of new management practices, and the introduction of new technologies.

Another key challenge facing the public sector is the need to improve the efficiency of services. This is a challenge that is being met by a number of initiatives, including the introduction of new management practices, the introduction of new technologies, and the introduction of new organisational structures.

A third key challenge facing the public sector is the need to improve the financial performance of services. This is a challenge that is being met by a number of initiatives, including the introduction of new management practices, the introduction of new technologies, and the introduction of new organisational structures.

There are a number of other challenges facing the public sector, including the need to improve the accessibility of services, the need to improve the sustainability of services, and the need to improve the transparency of services. These challenges are being met by a number of initiatives, including the introduction of new management practices, the introduction of new technologies, and the introduction of new organisational structures.

The public sector is a complex and challenging environment. It is an environment that is constantly changing, and it is an environment that requires a high level of commitment and dedication. The public sector is a sector that is essential to the well-being of the nation, and it is a sector that is deserving of our attention and support.

The public sector is a sector that is constantly evolving. It is a sector that is constantly adapting to the needs of the public, and it is a sector that is constantly striving for improvement. The public sector is a sector that is essential to the well-being of the nation, and it is a sector that is deserving of our attention and support.
