the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1998) and the number of people in the public sector who are employed in the health sector has increased by 1.2 million (from 1.3 million in 1980 to 2.5 million in 1998) (Department of Health 1999).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care provided by the public sector. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the Health Care Act 1999, which sets out a framework for the regulation of health care providers. The Act requires health care providers to meet certain standards of quality and safety, and to be subject to external regulation. The Act also sets out a framework for the regulation of health care professionals, and for the regulation of health care services.

The Health Care Act 1999 also sets out a framework for the regulation of health care providers.
