the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994).

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of knowledge on the needs of children in the 1990s, and to discuss the implications for policy and practice.

1. Introduction

The 1990s have been described as the 'decade of the child' (United Nations 1994). This is a reflection of the growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s.

The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994).

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of knowledge on the needs of children in the 1990s, and to discuss the implications for policy and practice.

2. The state of the world's children

The state of the world's children in the 1990s is a complex issue, and one that has attracted much attention from the international community. This section will review the current state of knowledge on the needs of children in the 1990s, and discuss the implications for policy and practice.
