the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion. This increase is due to a combination of factors, including a decline in infant mortality rates, a rise in life expectancy, and a high birth rate in many developing countries.

The increase in the number of children in the world has led to a corresponding increase in the number of children in the United States. In 1990, there were 75 million children under 18 years of age in the United States. By 2000, this number had increased to 80 million, and by 2010, it was estimated to be 85 million.

The increase in the number of children in the United States has led to a corresponding increase in the number of children in the workforce. In 1990, there were 10 million children in the workforce. By 2000, this number had increased to 12 million, and by 2010, it was estimated to be 15 million.

The increase in the number of children in the workforce has led to a corresponding increase in the number of children in the labor force. In 1990, there were 10 million children in the labor force. By 2000, this number had increased to 12 million, and by 2010, it was estimated to be 15 million.

The increase in the number of children in the labor force has led to a corresponding increase in the number of children in the labor market. In 1990, there were 10 million children in the labor market. By 2000, this number had increased to 12 million, and by 2010, it was estimated to be 15 million.
