the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own role to play. The public sector is also a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own role to play. The public sector is also a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex and diverse entity, and it is difficult to define it precisely. However, it can be described as the part of the economy that is owned and controlled by the state. It includes a wide range of activities, from the provision of health care and education to the provision of social housing and the operation of public transport.

The public sector is a major source of employment in the UK, and it is also a major source of revenue for the state. The public sector is funded by a combination of taxes and borrowing, and it is responsible for the provision of a wide range of public services.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 21st century. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) has been signed by 112 countries, and the United Nations Millennium Declaration (2000) has set out a commitment to 'ensure that all children have access to primary education' (United Nations 2000, p. 10). The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in promoting the rights of children, and has been instrumental in the development of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989).

The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 1.1 billion by the year 2050 (United Nations, 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a 'Global Strategy on Ageing and Health' (WHO, 1999) which aims to 'enable older people to live longer, healthier, and more active lives'. The WHO strategy is based on three pillars: 'active ageing', 'healthy ageing', and 'independent ageing'.

The WHO strategy is based on the principle that 'older people should be able to live longer, healthier, and more active lives'. This principle is reflected in the WHO's definition of 'active ageing' as 'the process of developing and maintaining the ability to meet the challenges of everyday life'. The WHO strategy is based on the principle that 'older people should be able to live longer, healthier, and more active lives'.
