the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1996).

There are a number of reasons why the world's population is becoming more undernourished. One of the main reasons is that the world's population is growing very rapidly. In 1990, there were 5.3 billion people in the world. By 2000, there will be 6.1 billion people in the world. By 2010, there will be 6.9 billion people in the world. By 2020, there will be 7.6 billion people in the world.

Another reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's food supply is not keeping pace with the world's population growth. In 1990, the world's food supply was 2.5 billion tonnes. By 2000, the world's food supply will be 3.1 billion tonnes. By 2010, the world's food supply will be 3.7 billion tonnes. By 2020, the world's food supply will be 4.3 billion tonnes.

A third reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's food is not being distributed evenly. In 1990, 1.2 billion people in the world were undernourished. By 2000, 1.5 billion people in the world were undernourished. By 2010, 1.8 billion people in the world were undernourished. By 2020, 2.1 billion people in the world were undernourished.

There are a number of ways in which the world's population can be made more food secure. One way is to increase the world's food supply. This can be done by increasing the world's agricultural production. Another way is to improve the world's food distribution. This can be done by reducing the world's food waste. A third way is to increase the world's food security. This can be done by improving the world's food storage.

By 2020, there will be 7.6 billion people in the world.

Another reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more urban. In 1990, 47% of the world's population lived in urban areas. By 2000, 53% of the world's population will live in urban areas. By 2010, 61% of the world's population will live in urban areas. By 2020, 68% of the world's population will live in urban areas.

A third reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more aged. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was aged 65 and over. By 2000, 12% of the world's population will be aged 65 and over. By 2010, 15% of the world's population will be aged 65 and over. By 2020, 18% of the world's population will be aged 65 and over.

A fourth reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more educated. In 1990, 50% of the world's population was illiterate. By 2000, 40% of the world's population will be illiterate. By 2010, 30% of the world's population will be illiterate. By 2020, 20% of the world's population will be illiterate.

A fifth reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more mobile. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was mobile. By 2000, 15% of the world's population will be mobile. By 2010, 20% of the world's population will be mobile. By 2020, 25% of the world's population will be mobile.

A sixth reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more diverse. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was diverse. By 2000, 15% of the world's population will be diverse. By 2010, 20% of the world's population will be diverse. By 2020, 25% of the world's population will be diverse.

A seventh reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more unequal. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was unequal. By 2000, 15% of the world's population will be unequal. By 2010, 20% of the world's population will be unequal. By 2020, 25% of the world's population will be unequal.

A eighth reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more polluted. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was polluted. By 2000, 15% of the world's population will be polluted. By 2010, 20% of the world's population will be polluted. By 2020, 25% of the world's population will be polluted.

A ninth reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more degraded. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was degraded. By 2000, 15% of the world's population will be degraded. By 2010, 20% of the world's population will be degraded. By 2020, 25% of the world's population will be degraded.

A tenth reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more destroyed. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was destroyed. By 2000, 15% of the world's population will be destroyed. By 2010, 20% of the world's population will be destroyed. By 2020, 25% of the world's population will be destroyed.

A eleventh reason why the world's population is becoming more undernourished is that the world's population is becoming more exhausted. In 1990, 10% of the world's population was exhausted. the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999). The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own role to play. The public sector is also a major employer in the UK, and this has implications for the way in which the public sector is managed and the way in which it is funded.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.6 billion, and the number of people aged 65 and over has increased from 0.2 billion to 0.5 billion (United Nations, 2002). The United Nations predicts that by 2050, the number of people aged 65 and over will be 1.2 billion, and the number of people under 15 years of age will be 1.9 billion (United Nations, 2002).

There are a number of factors that are likely to contribute to the increase in the number of people aged 65 and over. One of the main factors is the increase in life expectancy. In 1990, the life expectancy at birth was 47 years for men and 51 years for women. By 2050, the life expectancy at birth is predicted to be 74 years for men and 79 years for women (United Nations, 2002). This increase in life expectancy is due to a number of factors, including improvements in medical care, better nutrition, and a decline in the incidence of infectious diseases.

Another factor that is likely to contribute to the increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is the decline in the birth rate. In 1990, the birth rate was 28 children per 1,000 women aged 15-49. By 2050, the birth rate is predicted to be 12 children per 1,000 women aged 15-49 (United Nations, 2002). This decline in the birth rate is due to a number of factors, including a decline in the number of children that women have, and a decline in the number of women who have children.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is likely to have a number of implications for society. One of the main implications is the need for more social security and health care services. As the number of people aged 65 and over increases, the number of people who are dependent on social security and health care services will also increase. This will place a greater burden on the government and the private sector to provide these services.

Another implication of the increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is the need for more housing and transportation services. As the number of people aged 65 and over increases, the number of people who need housing and transportation services will also increase. This will place a greater burden on the government and the private sector to provide these services.

The increase in the number of people aged 65 and over is a major challenge for society. It is important that we take steps to address this challenge, so that we can ensure that all people, regardless of age, have the opportunity to live a healthy and productive life.
