The public sector is a complex organisation, and it is difficult to understand how it works. The public sector is made up of many different organisations, each of which has its own aims and objectives. The public sector is also funded by the government, and this has implications for the way in which it is managed and the way in which it is funded.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.2 billion (United Nations 1999). The number of children in the world is projected to increase to 2.5 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 1999). The United Nations (1999) also predicts that the number of children in the world will increase to 3.5 billion by the year 2050.

There are a number of factors that are likely to contribute to the increase in the number of children in the world. One of the most important factors is the increase in the life expectancy of people in the world. As people live longer, they are more likely to have children. Another factor is the increase in the number of people who are in the reproductive age group (15-49 years of age). The number of people in this age group is projected to increase to 2.5 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 1999).

The increase in the number of children in the world is a major challenge for the world's governments. The United Nations (1999) has identified a number of key areas where the world's governments need to focus their efforts. These areas include: (1) improving the health and education of children, (2) reducing the number of children who are in poverty, and (3) increasing the number of children who are employed.
