the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.6 billion, and the number of people aged 65 and over has increased from 0.2 billion to 0.5 billion (United Nations 1999). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 1.1 billion by the year 2050 (United Nations 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a 'Global Strategy on Ageing and Health' (WHO 1999) which aims to 'enable older people to live lives of fulfilment and to contribute to the development of their societies' (WHO 1999, p. 1). The WHO strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live lives of fulfilment and to contribute to the development of their societies.
- Older people should be able to live in their own homes and communities.
- Older people should be able to participate in social and cultural activities.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The WHO strategy is based on the following assumptions:

- Older people are a valuable resource.
- Older people should be able to live lives of fulfilment and to contribute to the development of their societies.
- Older people should be able to live in their own homes and communities.
- Older people should be able to participate in social and cultural activities.
