the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations has developed a set of 27 goals for children, known as the 'Agenda for Children' (United Nations 1990). The goals are designed to ensure that all children have access to basic education, health care, and social services.

The United Nations has also developed a set of 10 principles for the treatment of children, known as the 'Declaration of the Rights of the Child' (United Nations 1959). The principles are designed to ensure that children are treated with dignity and respect, and that their basic rights are protected.

The United Nations has also developed a set of 10 principles for the treatment of children, known as the 'Declaration of the Rights of the Child' (United Nations 1959).
