the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999 (Department of Health 2000).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care in the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner (Department of Health 2000).

The Department of Health has set out a number of objectives for the public sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the public sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the public sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the private sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the private sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the private sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the voluntary sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the voluntary sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the voluntary sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the independent sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the independent sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the independent sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the social enterprise sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the social enterprise sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the social enterprise sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the community sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the community sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the community sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the third sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the third sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the third sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the fourth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the fourth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the fourth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the fifth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the fifth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the fifth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the sixth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the sixth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the sixth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the seventh sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the seventh sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the seventh sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the eighth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the eighth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the eighth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the ninth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the ninth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the ninth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the tenth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the tenth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the tenth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the eleventh sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the eleventh sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the eleventh sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

The Department of Health has also set out a number of objectives for the twelfth sector, including the need to improve the quality of care, to ensure that the twelfth sector is able to meet the needs of the population in a cost-effective manner, and to ensure that the twelfth sector is able to provide a range of services that are of high quality and are cost-effective.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995 (Department of Health 1996).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public services, and the introduction of new management practices.

One of the main reasons for the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector is the increasing pressure on public resources. The public sector is now responsible for a much larger proportion of the UK's gross domestic product (GDP) than it was in the 1980s, and this has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public services, and the introduction of new management practices.

Another reason for the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector is the increasing demand for public services. the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1999). The number of people who are malnourished has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.5 billion (FAO 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the nutritional status of the world's population. The World Health Organization (WHO) has set a target of reducing the number of undernourished people in the world by 50% by the year 2015 (WHO 1999).

The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) has set a target of reducing the number of people who are malnourished by 50% by the year 2015 (UNDP 1999).

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- To ensure that older people have access to the services they need to live as well as possible.
- To ensure that older people are treated as individuals and not as a homogeneous group.

The strategy also sets out a number of objectives for the future of health care for older people. These include:

- To improve the quality of life of older people.
- To reduce the health inequalities between older people and other groups in the population.

The strategy is a key document in the development of health care for older people in the UK. It provides a framework for the development of policies and services for older people.
