the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and the number of people in the private sector has increased by 1.7 million (1990–1999).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care and services provided by the public sector. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the Health Care Act 1999, the introduction of the NHS Constitution, and the introduction of the NHS Performance Framework.

The Health Care Act 1999 introduced a number of changes to the way in which the NHS is run. These changes include the introduction of the NHS Constitution, the introduction of the NHS Performance Framework, and the introduction of the NHS Complaints Procedure.

The NHS Constitution is a document that sets out the values and principles that underpin the NHS. It also sets out the rights and responsibilities of patients, staff, and the public.

The NHS Performance Framework is a system of measures that are used to monitor and improve the performance of the NHS. It includes measures of patient safety, patient experience, and the quality of care.

The NHS Complaints Procedure is a system that allows patients to make complaints about the NHS. It is designed to be a fair and effective way of dealing with complaints.

There are a number of other initiatives that are aimed at improving the quality of care and services provided by the public sector. These include the introduction of the NHS Quality Standard, the introduction of the NHS Patient Safety Framework, and the introduction of the NHS Patient Experience Framework.

The NHS Quality Standard is a set of standards that are used to measure the quality of care and services provided by the NHS. It includes standards for patient safety, patient experience, and the quality of care.

The NHS Patient Safety Framework is a system of measures that are used to monitor and improve patient safety. It includes measures of patient safety, patient experience, and the quality of care.

The NHS Patient Experience Framework is a system of measures that are used to monitor and improve patient experience. It includes measures of patient safety, patient experience, and the quality of care.

There are a number of other initiatives that are aimed at improving the quality of care and services provided by the public sector. These include the introduction of the NHS Quality Standard, the introduction of the NHS Patient Safety Framework, and the introduction of the NHS Patient Experience Framework.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 4.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and social care of older people. The strategy is based on three main principles: (1) to improve the health and social care of older people; (2) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; and (3) to ensure that older people are able to participate in society.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the NHS to meet the needs of older people. The strategy is based on the principle that older people should be able to live in their own homes for as long as possible, and that they should be able to access the services they need to live safely and comfortably. The strategy also aims to improve the quality of life of older people, and to ensure that they are able to participate in the activities of their communities. The strategy is being implemented through a number of measures, including the development of new services, the improvement of existing services, and the provision of training and support for staff.

One of the key measures being implemented is the development of new services to support older people in their homes. These services include home care, day care, and respite care. Home care services provide support with everyday tasks, such as shopping, cooking, and cleaning. Day care services provide a safe and supervised environment for older people to spend their days. Respite care services provide a temporary respite for carers, allowing them to take a break from their caring responsibilities. The development of these services is essential to ensure that older people can live in their own homes for as long as possible.

Another key measure being implemented is the improvement of existing services. This includes the development of new care packages, the improvement of care standards, and the provision of training and support for staff. Care packages are developed to meet the specific needs of individual older people. Care standards are improved to ensure that older people receive the highest quality of care. Training and support are provided to staff to ensure that they are able to provide the best possible care for older people. The improvement of existing services is essential to ensure that older people receive the best possible care.

The provision of training and support for staff is also a key measure being implemented. This includes the provision of training in the care of older people, the provision of support for carers, and the provision of support for staff. Training in the care of older people is essential to ensure that staff are able to provide the best possible care for older people. Support for carers is essential to ensure that carers are able to cope with their caring responsibilities. Support for staff is essential to ensure that staff are able to provide the best possible care for older people. The provision of training and support for staff is essential to ensure that older people receive the best possible care.

The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of other measures to be implemented, including the development of new services, the improvement of existing services, and the provision of training and support for staff. These measures are essential to ensure that older people receive the best possible care.
