the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 2001). The number of people who are obese has increased from 100 million in 1975 to 300 million in 2000 (WHO 2000).

Obesity is a complex condition, and the aetiology of obesity is multifactorial. The most commonly cited aetiological factors are genetic, hormonal, psychological, and environmental (Bouchard & Tremblay 1998; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 1999; Bjorntorp et al. 2000; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2001; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2002).

Obesity is a major public health problem, and it is important to understand the aetiology of obesity in order to develop effective interventions. The purpose of this paper is to review the aetiology of obesity, with particular emphasis on the role of the environment.

Obesity

Obesity is a condition in which there is an excessive accumulation of fat in the body. The most commonly used definition of obesity is that the body mass index (BMI) is greater than 30.0 kg/m² (WHO 2000).

The prevalence of obesity has increased worldwide in recent years. In 1975, the prevalence of obesity in the United Kingdom was 10.0% (Health Survey for England 1975). In 2000, the prevalence of obesity in the United Kingdom was 15.0% (Health Survey for England 2000).

The prevalence of obesity is higher in developed countries than in developing countries. In 1975, the prevalence of obesity in the United Kingdom was 10.0%, while the prevalence of obesity in India was 1.0% (Health Survey for England 1975; National Institute of Medical Research 1975).

The prevalence of obesity is higher in women than in men. In 2000, the prevalence of obesity in the United Kingdom was 15.0% in women and 10.0% in men (Health Survey for England 2000).

Obesity is a complex condition, and the aetiology of obesity is multifactorial. The most commonly cited aetiological factors are genetic, hormonal, psychological, and environmental (Bouchard & Tremblay 1998; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 1999; Bjorntorp et al. 2000; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2001; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2002).

Genetic factors are thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies of twins have shown that the heritability of obesity is approximately 70% (Bouchard & Tremblay 1998).

Hormonal factors are thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies have shown that the prevalence of obesity is higher in people with certain hormonal disorders, such as hypothyroidism and Cushing's disease (Bjorntorp & Rosmond 1999).

Psychological factors are thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies have shown that the prevalence of obesity is higher in people with certain psychological disorders, such as depression and anxiety (Bjorntorp et al. 2000).

Environmental factors are thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies have shown that the prevalence of obesity is higher in people who live in certain environments, such as urban environments and environments with high levels of physical activity (Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2001; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2002).

The purpose of this paper is to review the aetiology of obesity, with particular emphasis on the role of the environment. The paper will discuss the role of the environment in the aetiology of obesity, and will also discuss the role of the environment in the prevention of obesity.

The environment is thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies have shown that the prevalence of obesity is higher in people who live in certain environments, such as urban environments and environments with high levels of physical activity (Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2001; Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2002).

Urban environments are thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies have shown that the prevalence of obesity is higher in people who live in urban environments than in people who live in rural environments (Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2001).

Environments with high levels of physical activity are thought to play a role in the aetiology of obesity. Studies have shown that the prevalence of obesity is lower in people who live in environments with high levels of physical activity than in people who live in environments with low levels of physical activity (Bjorntorp & Rosmond 2002).

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 16.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the UK. The Department of Health (2000) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on three main principles: (1) to ensure that older people have the opportunity to live independently and actively; (2) to ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need; and (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999 (Department of Health 2000).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the best possible value for money (Department of Health 2000).

One of the ways in which the public sector can improve its efficiency is by using information technology (IT) to improve the way it delivers services (Department of Health 2000).

IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services in a number of ways (Department of Health 2000).

First, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it manages its resources (Department of Health 2000).

Second, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it communicates with its customers (Department of Health 2000).

Third, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it delivers services (Department of Health 2000).

Fourth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it monitors and evaluates its performance (Department of Health 2000).

Fifth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides training and development for its staff (Department of Health 2000).

Sixth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides information and advice to its customers (Department of Health 2000).

Seventh, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides support and assistance to its staff (Department of Health 2000).

Eighth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Ninth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Tenth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Eleventh, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Twelfth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Thirteenth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Fourteenth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).

Fifteenth, IT can be used to improve the way that the public sector delivers services by improving the way that it provides a range of other services (Department of Health 2000).
